A Little Bit About Myself

I've always been intrigued by web design & user experience. I vividly remember winning my first hackathon at Facebook in high school as the moment that let me know that I could excel in the field. My passion in the field lead me to studying how websites work on my free time fresh out of high-school. Going from a user to a designer has truly been an amazing experience.

Currently completing Information Systems degree at Boston College

Commenter Name If you're going to lead a space frontier, it has to be government; it'll never be private enterprise. Because the space frontier is dangerous, and it's expensive, and it has unquantified risks.

Commenter Name And if you have the right conditions, you cannot establish a capital-market evaluation of that enterprise. You can't get investors.

Commenter Name When you put money directly to a problem, it makes a good headline.

Commenter Name When I look at the universe and all the ways the universe wants to kill us, I find it hard to reconcile that with statements of benevolence.
